Clearing a Path to the Wonderfulness of You

From the Archangelic Realm of Michael this is Michael and We welcome you now as you continue on this wonderful and most extraordinary journey into the depth of your heart.

We come now to speak to you about clearing the pathway as you move towards what you say you want with intention and commitment. This pathway leads to the most extraordinary parts of you and it is now time to clear that pathway by looking at all the wonderful aspects of you. It is time to take them out, place them on your mantle to look at them, adore them, see them, honor and value them, and hold them dear to you.

We have asked you many times to look in the mirror to see where you are with “what is” in your life. You have done this and it is important that you continue to. And as you have been doing this, perhaps you look for what you have labeled the “negative” aspects of yourself. Seeing the aspects of you that you think you still need to work on, that you still need help with. This is necessary and should continue, yet it is now time to solidify your power and we suggest at this time you begin to look at all of the wonderful and glorious aspects of yourself. Look for those in your life who mirror these aspects of you. You have looked at the relationships that mirror aspects that you label not good enough or “negative” and think you still need to work on. See these as well but now shift your focus.

Many of you “get stuck” thinking that you still need to work on aspects of yourself before you can see the wonderful aspects of you and your life. Many are focusing on what you have not done yet, what you still need to work on, and what is most challenging. In doing this and solely focusing there, you are negating all the wonderful aspects that are being mirrored back to you as well.

You are working diligently on your challenges and your focus is there. And perhaps you may take a glimpse at the wonderful and glorious aspects of yourself. Look now to see where your focus is the majority of the time. It is time to shift your focus to see all the wonderful aspects of you. Take them out as if they were trophies and put them on your mantle. Take out your polish and clean these trophies, the glorious aspects of you that you simply adore. Or do you?

As you see the challenges before you, your sole focus perhaps is there and on nothing else. We ask you to look now at “what is” in your life already, We have belabored this point many times. Write down your accomplishments.

As you look at your challenges and focus there, you may forget that what allows you to entertain and move through these challenges are the greatest aspects of you.

Look at how far you have come to reach this point in your life, and see that you have faced many challenges and overcome them. Praise yourself, because dear ones, it is you who has done this. Take a step back from looking at your challenges and move within to pull out all the wonderful aspects of yourself. Place them on your mantle, look at them and cherish them because all of these glorious aspects of you, your talents and gifts, your assets and attributes may have been collecting dust over a long period of time.

Focusing on your challenges has been very important and still is, yet it is now time to be with yourself in the moment and acknowledge what is wonderful about you. It is time to pull out these aspects of you, clean them off, and wipe away the dust. Wipe away the dust that has accumulated on you and the light that shines in the depth of your heart, the radiatory light of you.

For many, the radiatory force of light within has become dulled and clouded because your main focus has been on your challenges and the drama that surrounds them. This is all well and good in its own time, but this message is about seeing the wonderful aspects of you and reconnecting to you.

It is time to re-connect to the wonderful-ness and the glorious-ness of you.
Time to re-connect to the power within.
It is time to fully re-connect with you.
